REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS

For President

WILLIAM McKINLEY,

Of Ohio

For Vice President

GARRET A. HOBART,

Of New Jersey

Greatest on Record.

This morning we publish in another place returns from 477 cities, towns and plantations which give Powers 52,773 Frank 38,516. The same ratio of increase in the remaining towns will give Powers a plurality in the State of 49,000. This is the greatest political victory on record and as will be seen by the comments quoted this morning it will be a source of inspiration to the campaign in every other State. With the encouragement afforded from Maine's verdict, the supporters of McKinley will force the fighting in every quarter from now until November when the people of the whole country will speak for protection and honest money. Some of the free silver papers have made a weak attempt to divert Maine's vote but they do not have any faith in their own statements. Knowing as they do that it simply foreshadows the complete annihilation of Bryanism. Here is a significant paragraph from the correspondence of the New York World:

Looking over the results of this day work in Maine after a tour for the World of nearly all the critical States, and recognizing in the impressive yet the result of symptoms which I have noticed in the country generally, I am satisfied that in spite of what Mr. Sewall says this Maine election foreshadows the result in November. The blow has fallen. The victory was written by Mr. James Freeman one of the staff correspondents of the World, and a widely known journalist, who has traveled all over the United States to investigate the situation in the pending campaign. The despatch from which the above is quoted was written from Bath, the home of the Democratic candidate for Vice President. Mr. Freeman is personally a warm admirer of Bryan, but as a faithful historian he reports the situation as he sees it. The appeal to the American people this year is to patriotism and honest money. That is what has always found a ready and effective response. There is absolutely nothing of a substantial character to the free silver campaign. When the frothy arguments are analyzed, the arguments are being analyzed this year nothing remains. Men who have earnestly listened to all the free silver advocates had to say with an honest desire for information have yet to learn in what way the free coinage of silver offers any inducement to the average voter.

The campaign in this State has been conducted entirely on national issues. Personalities have had no place in the discussions. Both sides of the controversy have been presented to the people and the verdict therefore must be accepted as a deliberate judgment on the merits of the questions involved. A similar campaign in other States is bound to have similar results. Wherever these questions are fully understood there can be no doubt of the popular verdict.

Failed to Materialize

That alleged Republican free silver farmer did not materialize at the polls—Portland Argus.

Not to any extent. The Commercial has been addressing itself for some time past to the farmers of this section. It has told them lots of things that were not true concerning the causes that have led to the present hard times and a lot more things equally untrue as to the results of free coinage. But the Maine farmer has had of thinking for himself and as a result went to the polls and voted against the silver heresy. The Argus cannot be much surprised at the result in the State as it told the Democratic brethren before it concluded to swallow the silver coated pill that a free silver campaign meant political suicide and it was right.

Dirty Water.

Some of our citizens have called upon Mayor Beall and requested him to call a special meeting of the City Council for the purpose of taking action on the resolve introduced at the last session, and supported by a large majority of the board. Since then the people have voted against the proposition to extend the water works and now no reason exists for delaying the adoption of the resolve which provides funds for the completion of the filter and the schoolhouse as well as the running expenses of the departments. The water as now pumped is too dirty for domestic uses. The old filter was disconnected some time ago and the water that is now pumped, as we understand it, has no filtration whatever. It is to be hoped that the Mayor will assemble the two boards immediately so that the resolve may be adopted and the filter completed.

The Victory in Maine.

The amazing plurality of over 40,000, the largest in the history of the State, given to the Republican candidate in yesterday's election in Maine ought to cheer every honest man in the United States. That it will carry dismay into the ranks of the advocates of dishonest money cannot be doubted.

Chairman Jones, of the Populistic National Committee, said on Monday that anything above 25,000 Republican plurality would be regarded by him as adverse to the free coinage cause. That majority over the Populistic candidates has been doubled. In a quarter of a century the Republicans of Maine have not before had a plurality of 20,000 in a Presidential election. The increase to 50,000 is a striking and telling verdict against the coinage of silver and Bryanism in general.

Mr. Sewall, an ardent ally of Maine, is the Populistic candidate for Vice President. He has seen that the Republican majority, swayed in the direction of the Populistic plank, would be a disaster to his party. But his own party, the Populists, have been in the State since the day of the Civil War and they have never been able to win a single election.

subjects discussed. The result is a remarkable declaration to the world that the farmers and workmen of Maine, as well as the business men, will not have any part or lot in repudiation, or in receiving secession doctrine, or any of the other monstrous changes advocated by Bryan and his Southern followers.

Following Vermont, the result in Maine is doubly significant. It means that so far as the North is concerned it will stand solid for the honor of the nation and against repudiation and anarchy. It demonstrates that when the people are fully informed on the questions on which they are called upon to decide there is no room for doubt as to their verdict for honesty. In 1888, when the question before the people was as to whether or not the Government bonds should be paid in gold Maine stood for gold and gave 25,000 majority against the proposed repudiation of a part of the nation's debt. Maine is true, to herself by giving almost double that majority this year against a still worse proposition to repudiate honest debts.

Let the good work of education go on, and the result in the whole country will be more disastrous for dishonesty than it was in 1888, when the Republican majority in an electoral college was 174. It was evident that many Democrats are assisting in this good work.

If a September election ever meant anything, the vote in Maine yesterday signifies that the tide of American sentiment is setting steadily and irresistibly to the direction of sound money and National honor. Vermont gave the first indication of the popular rejection of repudiation and anarchy. But the verdict of a State more subject to the currents of changing opinion of more diversified interests and less extreme partisan tendencies was needed to make the answer to a shrewd appeal so emphatic as to dismay those who make them and encourage patriotic citizens to the hard work which the prospect of great victory stimulates. Vermont gave the lead to the story that the Eastern farmer had succumbed to the cheap money temptation with which Mr. Bryan's followers have sought to create a pipe. Maine says that no trade no interest, no tie of party no influence of local pride no seed of greenback heresy even, can induce the voters of the United States to dishonor their country or cheat their fellow-men.

It is impossible as yet to fix accurately the size of the Republican plurality. At the hour of writing indications are that it will be almost if not quite 50,000. The plurality might fall several thousand below that and still leave yesterday's achievement the greatest victory ever won by the Republicans in Maine. Neither Freeman nor Lincoln nor Garret nor Blaine nor Sherman ever carried the State by any such vote. In 1872 Hayes carried it by 16,781. In 1880 after the state election had gone Democratic by a narrow plurality, Garret managed to win by 8,818. The Republican vote carried it by 19,770 in September 1884 and 20,029 in November. In September 1888 the plurality was 18,046 and in November 23,217. That September election I repeat, Garret's election and four years later a tidal wave of 12,322 forced it down the country. The election of 1894, with its phenomenal plurality of 38,000, was the index of the dissatisfaction with hard times then felt so acutely and manifested so strongly in large the next November. That great victory has been outdone and the meaning is unmistakable.

There are some drafts too big to be discounted even out of the Federal reserve of a syndicate of silver kings. One of these drafts has been drawn by the right honorable electorate of the State of Maine.

Concessions no matter with what frame they have the effect of having been poured out in the last few days can light the fire of gravity of a minority of 50,000 votes in a State which has been wont to give 12,000 and 14,000 in contested elections, a State which gave less than 20,000 for her own three favored sons, a State which the Democratic candidate started blithely forth to carry six short weeks ago, a State for which the bat was set of the second place on the ticket.

Miss Chapman usually visits Harmsworth once a year and many of the citizens have knowledge of her ability to produce very delicious dishes. If the pupils in Hartford schools do not become proficient cooks it is safe to say that it will be due to some laboratory inability rather than to any fault of the director.
